MONARO

No toys. No boys.

Just when you thought the pure pleasure of driving had been stolen for ever by electronic gizmos, along comes a car that gives total control back to the driver. That car is Monaro.

Monaro adrenalin? The legendary 5.7-litre Chevrolet V8, heartbeat of a nation brought up on the muscle-car phenomenon. Monaro DNA? The renowned Holden enthusiasm for the muscle car breed. A wide, low stance, aggressive front end, the body language of a genuine performance car you just can't fake or disguise. The combination? A true sports coupé that simply pulsates emotion, a new muscle car for a new generation.

It's built to stir your emotions, to let you be at one with your car and the road ahead, the longer and more winding the better. Communicate with both. Feel it... unparalleled enjoyment born from the fulfilment of a truly untrammeled driving experience.

Quite simply, Monaro comes to you pure. So leave the games consoles to the boys and come back to the real world.

Monaro is here... Game Over.
No matter how fast you’re going, the loudest sound inside the Monaro is the rumbling thunder of Chevy’s smallblock V8.

Built from lightweight aluminium, it’s a 5.7-litre marvel that shares the DNA of the racing engines that scored countless victories on racetracks all around the world and continues to do so, while roadgoing versions won the hearts of millions of enthusiastic drivers.

There are 50 years of racing heritage beneath every touch of the gas pedal, a constant quest for improvement that now puts 354PS behind every burst of acceleration. But it’s not one of those highly tuned and temperamental performance engines. A massive torque output of 500Nm make it an understressed and relaxed unit with extreme capabilities.

Whatever you ask from it – it delivers. No ifs. No buts.

Astounding acceleration and tremendous top speed... the hallmark of a true muscle car.
It looks good. Too good to be a four-seater. It sits low, with a firm grip on the road—and on your senses. Mean, greedy intakes, a pair of big-bore exhausts. One look tells you it means business and one drive tells you it is the business.

With all-independent sports suspension, it’s got the kind of chassis balance that tells you at once that the engineers who made it weren’t just car guys, they were car guys on a mission—but there’s no mission control electronics here. Traction control is there if you want it, but there will be days when you want to switch it off. So when you drive Monaro gives you the satisfaction of knowing that it’s all your own work.

With 320mm ventilated front discs and 286mm solid on the rear, four-channel ABS and a limited-slip diff, Monaro keeps you in control, hauling it to a standstill as quickly as it takes off again.

Power, handling, braking—the package is complete. Monaro lets you take on your favourite roads with no fuss and eat the motorway miles with no bother.

Fashion and style played no part in shaping the muscle car, but its looks said everything anyone needed to know.
Sit in it, and you know what it’s built for. Everything about it tells you, from the firm grip of the leather sports seats to the thick leather wheel. Ignore the buttons – they only work the radio. Concentrate on the wheel: it controls the car, and the road ahead.

Big, round instruments dead ahead. Vital gauges in the sight-line on top of the dash. One glance, and you know all there is to know, all you need to know. Leave the computers where they belong, while you get on with the fun of driving, snicking ratios, flowing through the curves.

Even the rear seats are made for this, so you’ll hear no protest from the back. In fact, sitting in climate-controlled comfort, winding up the sounds from the 260-watt music system, your passengers will probably want to ride with you again and again, enjoying the thrills of the Monaro.

The muscle car was part of the sixties American dream, and like so much else from that decade, it lives on in the hearts of its fans.
